

ENG101 Week Six In-Class Essay

Prompts

You can pick one of these or something else, but remember the assignment is an argumentative essay — you must be arguing a point.

- What does it mean for a social movement to succeed? To fail?
- What is Alice Walker's perspective on the civil rights movement? What arguments does she make to support her perspective? What is the different view? Who has that view?
- What is the beginning of a movement? What is the end?
- What should a movement demand? Should a movement set achievable goals? Do demands limit who can participate? Or do they help people join? Is it enough to seek "knowledge of [her] condition?" Can that be the stated goal?

Class Discussion (after writing)

- What was your strategy? How did you manage your time?
- What did you find difficult?
- What prompts did you use? Or what did you come up with?
- What did you think of the essay?
